NEGRO KILLED BY A TRAIN

Will White Instantly Killed by an Incoming Train Sunday Night Last.

Will White, a negro well known about town, was instantly killed by L. & N. train No. 18, Sunday night at 8:25 o'clock. The negro was killed in the lower end of the town and almost directly in front of his home. Bill, for some years has been a familiar figure about town and a negro who has been in the habit of getting drunk. It is supposed that on the night he was killed he had become intoxicated and had sat upon the track for a rest. He thereupon went to sleep and failed to awake before the night train came in. He had been sitting on the end of the track, when he discovered he had been removed from his seat.

Death must have been instantaneous, his head being crushed in, aside from other bruises suffered. The negro was buried Monday afternoon. The death of this negro was especially tragic inasmuch as he was killed by the train that bore the remains of Carl Etherington, the boy whose murder has brought grief to so many in this county.

It was some time after the train arrived that the crowd which awaited young Etherington's remains knew that the negro had been killed.

Hotel Association Meeting.

The Kentucky Hotel Association will hold its annual meeting at the Seelbach Hotel in Louisville, July 19 and 20. W. D. Claybrook, of this place, is secretary of the Association and has arranged an attractive program for the meeting. Among the speakers will be Woodson Moss, who is well remembered here. While in Louisville the members of the Association will be met by the Seelbach Hotel Co., Frank Fehr, Hirsch Bros., and Fontaine Ferry Park. They will be welcomed to the city by Mayor W. O. Head.

W. D. Claybrook and S. B. Thompson, of this place will be in attendance at the meeting.

The Vagrant Question.

The Harrodsburg City Council has adopted a plan by which it is believed the vagrant population of the town will be greatly diminished. At a meeting of the board an order was made instructing the Chief of Police to arrest all vagrants and persons without any visible means of support and bring them before the Police Court. There is complaint from the farmers on the scarcity of laborers to harvest the wheat crop, which is now ready to be harvested, and all persons arrested by the police will be given the choice of going to the workhouse or the farm.

McIntire.

Emmanuel Medley, of Louisville, is the guest of relatives here.

Miss Teresa Haydon, accompanied by Miss Greene, of Dault's Station, are visiting Mrs. Helen Alvey this week.

Misses Lizze and Susie Murphy, of Louisville, are here on a visit to their parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Murphy.

Wat Wheatley has returned from Fredericksburg, where he has been visiting relatives.

Mrs. Mattie Clements, who has been quite ill with malarial fever the past week, is slightly improved at this writing.

The little child of Mr. and Mrs. Asker Graves is also seriously ill.

The infant son of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Enos was buried on the 2nd inst.

Len McIntire and Paul Keene were among the number from this place who attended the Chautauqua at Lebanon, last week.

Miss Flora Keene has accepted a school near Springfield and will begin teaching next week.

Misses Mary Bell and Lucille Montgomery, after a pleasant visit to their grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Tom Blandford, have returned home.

Charley Montgomery, of Louisville, was the guest of his sister, Mrs. Clea Pile, last week.

Soreness of the muscles, whether induced by violent exercise or injury, is quickly relieved by the free application of Chamberlain's Liniment. This treatment is equally valuable for muscular rheumatism and always affords quick relief. Sold by all druggists.

"All is Lost But Honor."

Many a Springfield man who went to Lebanon last Friday, his manly bosom pulsating with hope and expectation, came home bereft of his hope and filled with disappointment. This was all caused by the Campbellville baseball team defeating Springfield for the Chautauqua cup by a score of 6 to 1. Each of these teams had won two games and the play off came Friday. It was in some respects a good game and was witnessed by an immense crowd of people from Campbellville, Columbia, Springfield and Lebanon. Campbellville scored at the beginning of the contest but was afterward tied by Springfield. It was not long, however, until Campbellville had put several other runs over the plate, and Springfield was never again in the fight. "Jocks" Colvin, Shultz and Brown pitched for Springfield, while Wilson, for Campbellville pitched magnificent ball.

OUR FRIEND THE HAY-SEED

An Essay on the Agriculturist—
The Smart Ales of the Press
Always Ridiculing Him.

Down through the centuries the farmer has been the butt of many jokes and jibes. The funny papers illustrate him with chin whiskers carrying a carpet sack, buying gold bricks from smart confidence men. He is run over by the cars. He is an easy mark. He has seed in his hair. Now, for a passing moment I turn the searchlight of my intellect upon the farmer. Is he such a Rube? Is the city man so darnation smart? The farmer sells for spot cash everything he raises. He buys everything on credit. In the meantime his cash is out on "intrust." As he is perfectly good the merchant is afraid to dun him for his money. Where cotton prices do not suit Mr. Farmer he forms a combination, holds his cotton for an advance in price, and calmly tells the merchant, when he asks for his money, to go to it.

Then the government sends him expensive books, free of charge, on the subject of farming. He receives free seeds from his Congressman. Thousands and thousands of dollars are spent annually by our paternal government on farm experiments—all for the benefit of the so-called hay-seed.

Then we have rural free delivery at a loss to the government running up into the millions of dollars every year. All this is for the country Rube.

Then on the horizon looms a parcel post. If it comes the country will pay for parcels post mainly for the benefit of the alleged man who carries a carpet sack and allows an automobile to back up on him.

The smart city man pays one-third of the taxes—pays higher prices for all farm products—has two belted eggs on Sunday morning as a special treat—gives up his city home and moves into an apartment to reduce the cost of living—quits going to the theater and enjoys himself at a nickelodeon.

Well, it would seem, taking all these facts into consideration, that our farmer friend is not quite as much of a Rube as he is painted by the, would be, funny papers. He now has his hot and cold bath, gasoline engine to pump the water, do the washing and churn the butter. The Rube receives his market report in his own home by telephone.

THE LYNCHING TRAGEDY IN OHIO

The Sheriff's Neglect Responsible For The Lynching of Detective Carl M. Etherington, Son of Hartwell Etherington, of Willisburg.

BODY BROUGHT TO WILLISBURG FOR BURIAL

The dastardly and cowardly lynching of young Etherington at Newark, O., recently calls for the most searching investigation by the authorities. This Ohio town has long been classed as a "tough" place. Law and order has been ignored to an anarchic degree, and it is to be hoped that the leaders in this atrocious crime will speedily be brought to justice. Following is an account of the affair.

Newark, O., July 9.—Fully 500 people of this town, unmasked, last night aided in the brutal lynching of Carl Etherington, an anti-saloon Detective. A grand jury investigation of the affair has been ordered and the authorities have caused it to be known that such an investigation will be made as soon as the grand jury shall next convene.

Etherington, who was a native of Willisburg, Washington county, Ky., was employed by the State Anti-Saloon League as a blind tiger raider, was lynched last night at 10:35 o'clock after a day of almost continuous rioting. The doors of the Licking county jail were battered down and Etherington was dragged from his cell. He was shot, kicked, and struck on the head with a hammer before the street was reached, and the finish followed quickly. He was only seventeen years of age.

Etherington early in the evening confessed he killed William Howard, proprietor of the "Last Chance" restaurant and former chief of police, in a raid of alleged "speakeasies," in a raiding scuffle at 1:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon, and narrowly escaped lynching at that time. When news from the hospital passed over the city, at 9 o'clock last night, the fury of the mob took definite form. Large battering rams were directed upon the doors of the jail, and the deputies were powerless. The doors fell after nearly an hour's attack.

Etherington was dragged through the streets to the courthouse square and hanged to a tree in the courthouse yard. The horrible affair was witnessed by about 5,000 men, women and children. It is believed that Etherington was dead before he was strung up. The body was left hanging in the courthouse yard.

Etherington asked for permission to make a statement to the mob, and as he attempted to speak somebody struck him a vicious blow on top of the head with a hammer, felling him to the ground, and this blow is believed to have killed him.

Adjutant General Weybrecht says Licking county officials, particularly Sheriff William Linke, are responsible for the lynching here of Detective Carl Etherington, the Kentuckian, who shot former police chief Howard in the blind tiger raid. He has so reported to Gov. Harmon. "The lynching could easily have been prevented," says General Weybrecht. "The established fact that the mob worked at the jail for two hours tells the story of negligence. If troops had been called for when they should have been, the State of Ohio would not now be disgraced."

Sheriff Linke did not call out the Newark Co. of the Ohio National Guard G. of the Fourth regiment. Capt. Priest says he was informed that it was not even necessary to have men at the armory in case of emergency.

The Eubanks anti-mob law, passed at the last session of the Legislature, provides for immediate suspension of the sheriff in case he does not protect prisoners in his custody. Suspension is followed by a hearing before the Governor.

The Governor has suspended the mayor, chief of police and the police captain. New officers were appointed and arrests immediately followed.

last tribute of respect to the dead and to manifest their sympathy for his family. Many had accompanied the youth's father, Hartwell Etherington, from his home near Willisburg. Amidst the most pathetic surroundings the coffin was opened for the purpose of identification, the grief of the father being tragic as he knelt by the open coffin and recognized in the battered and mutilated contents his son.

The remains were immediately taken to the Etherington home, near Willisburg, where they remained until the next day, when the funeral was held at the Christian church, Rev. Jesse Grubbs conducting the services. It is estimated that the crowd in attendance numbered between 2,000 and 3,000 people, probably the largest number that ever attended a funeral in this county.

For hours after the services the people stood around in groups discussing the horror of the tragedy and expressing their sympathy for the family, especially the mother, who has been in a critical condition since her son was killed. Indeed the bereaved parents have the sympathy of all who have heard of the cruel murder of their son, a number of telegrams of condolence having come from a distance.

PLEASANT GROVE.

Mrs. W. H. Haves and Mrs. Maggie Miller, of Blainville, have returned home after a visit at Judge Lutsy's.

N. P. Thompson and sister, Miss Mabel, spent Sunday and Monday in Harrodsburg.

Miss Ella Sweeney, of Grundy Home, visited R. M. Thompson, Sunday.

Rev. R. E. C. Lawson conducted communion services at Pleasant Grove church Sunday. Six members were received into the church.

Carlisle Clelland, of Middleboro, united with his family at J. F. Gregory's, Saturday.

Arvin Noe, of Columbus, Ohio, has returned home after a visit at the home of S. C. Vanarsdale.

Miss Harvey Vanarsdale left Monday for a visit to her sister, Mrs. H. M. Noe, at Columbia, Ky.

B. Scanlon, of Louisville, has returned home after a visit to his mother, at 'quire J. O. Poin's.

Miss Gage Gregory is spending the week with Mrs. Deatour Drago.

Mrs. Alice Thompson, of Springfield, spent a few days last week in this community.

Mrs. S. P. Thompson entertained the following ladies at dinner last Wednesday: Mrs. Maline Kinehart of California, Mrs. B. D. Lake and Mrs. James Noe, of Springfield.

Miss Adeline Cox spent Sunday with Mrs. J. J. Martin.

Mrs. Nellie Thurman and daughter, Mrs. Mary Logan Neale, are spending the week with Mrs. B. B. Leachman.

The Tablow ball team came down Saturday to play the "Litsay Stars."

However, it seems that Litsay did most of the playing as the Tablow boys were unable to score. Litsay 5; Tablow 0.

Miss Belle Birch, of Willisburg, spent several days recently with her brother, Ed Birch.

Skin and Scalp

Troubles Yield to Zemo.

A clean light preparation for external use! Leo Haydon's store is so confident that ZEMO will rid the skin and scalp of infants or grown persons of pimples, blackheads, dandruff, eczema, prickly heat, rashes, hives, ivy poison or any other form of skin or scalp eruption; that they will give your money back if you are not entirely satisfied with the result obtained from ZEMO.

The first application will give prompt relief and show an improvement, and in every instance where used persistently, will destroy the germ life, leaving the skin in a clean, healthy condition.

Claims to Have Found
$90,000 in Gold.

Thomas L. Rodgers, of High Point, N. C., has published a statement to the effect that he recently found $90,000 in gold coin in what is known as the Rock House Cave, on the Clinch river, in Hancock county, Tennessee. Rodgers says that the information that such a sum of money was in the cave was revealed to him in an impelling dream. As he relates it, he went from his North Carolina home to his childhood home in Hancock county to explore the cave and with a lantern made the exploration alone and found in a large chamber, many turned kettle, under which was stacked the gold.

Around the old kettle were found rusty bayonets, canteens and other things indicating that the cave was used as a place of refuge during the Civil War. Beside the kettle was found the skeleton of a man, and upon a slate stone slab near by was an inscription telling of the gold and directing the finder to take charge of it on condition that he bury the body of the owner in a designated spot on the summit of the mountain in which the cave is located.

Rodgers says he complied with the terms of the inscription and left the cave with the money in his possession.

DRINKS NO WHISKEY

Ben Johnson a Total Abstainer,
Never Having Drank Liquor
During His Whole Life.

The Kentucky Standard, published at Bardonia, the home of Ben Johnson, who is a candidate for Governor, in a long article endorsing Mr. Johnson's candidacy, has this to say of his record as a temperance man:

"He has never tasted a drop of whiskey in his life—can those opposing him say as much? He has voted for local option in every election that has been held in his voting precinct since he became a legal voter. Can anyone doubt more? He was a member of the State Senate when the present County Unit law was placed upon the Statute book of this State and worked and voted for the measure. The most ardent advocate of temperance in the Senate did the same. It is a well known fact that it was a choice of this law or none at all and his vote is recorded for the law and his efforts aided in securing this law, which has been most satisfactory to the advocates of temperance."

LOCUST GROVE.

N. P. Thompson and sister, Miss Mabel, are visiting friends at Harrodsburg. Will Fitzgerald and wife, of near Springfield, spent Friday with Mr. and Mrs. H. F. Reed.

Miss F. Litsay is spending two weeks with her aunt, Mrs. Nannie Boltitt, at Lebanon.

Miss Caroline Jones, of Louisville, is the guest of her sisters, at this place.

Born, to the wife of Sol Kayes, a fine boy.

Medames Sallie Robertson, Zelma Lake and James Noe and children, of Springfield, spent Thursday with Mrs. S. P. Thompson.

Mr. and Mrs. Tom Baker and children spent Sunday with her daughter, Mrs. Hugh Leachman.

Mr. and Mrs. John Peters, and Mrs. and Mrs. Orenth Peters, of Mackville, dined with Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Yankey, Thursday.

Mrs. Minnie Reed spent Thursday afternoon with Mrs. Julia Leachman.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Markersbury spent Sunday with her brother, Ed Hardin, near town.

Mrs. William Hardin, of Loretto, has returned home after a visit with her daughter, Mrs. Margaret Markersbury.

Miss Lillian Leachman spent Sunday at Tatham.

James Williams and Joe Starg, of Harrodsburg, spent Sunday with the Litsay Bros.

ABOUT THAT AUTOMOBILE

The Quaint Logic Advanced By a Congressman in Support of an Auto for the Speaker

When the appropriation bill was being discussed in Congress, the item of $5,000 a year for the upkeep of a motor car for the speaker of the House of Representatives was detected by a Congressman in an odd and pernicious way, namely, by referring to the amount such a expenditure would cost each individual in the United States. He advocated the appropriation on the ground that the $5,000 would amount to the one thirty-sixth of a cent for each inhabitant of the United States, and he wanted to know if there was anyone in this country who would refuse the speaker one thirty-sixth of a penny.

The Florida Times-Union referred to the statement very pertinently by stating that it would cost only about one-half as much to provide the speaker with a piano every year and to give him a house worth $100,000 would cost every citizen only one cent. "Once embarked in this way, why should not the ill-paid justices of the Supreme Court, be provided with houses and each of the members of the cabinet, and then why should they draw the line at its pensions, like generals of the army, and so on, until we have provided every officer in the government with an automobile, a grand piano, a house, etc.?"

However, it is the same kind of argument which one frequently hears concerning the tariff. Thus we are told that the additional cost of sugar on account of the duty upon it to each individual household in the United States is so small that it seems insignificant. When it is said that the tariff taxes up on a certain commodity costs the people of this country a hundred millions a year someone rises to remark that it is only about $1.00 per annum, and that surely nobody would regret paying $1.00 to encourage a great American industry.

Yet it is this one thirty-sixth of a cent, these pennies, these dollars, which added together makes a burden that millions of people find themselves unable to carry. A single battleship cost the individual inhabitant in this country but a penny, but a great navy built at a nation's cost and maintained at a great waste, becoming obsolete in a short time and its only use as scrap pile, means less food and poorer clothing to the average American citizen. But such is the game of politics. And such the tendency to become prodigal with what belongs to all of the people. Suppose the speaker of the House, the audacity, when asking for an appropriation for a favorite official, to divert attention from the principal involved by asking who objects to his pro rata share.—Dayton, O., Daily News.

FENWICK.

Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Barker spent Sunday at Tatham Springs.

Miss Myrtle Perkins spent Saturday with Miss Ethel Crumes.

Mrs. S. C. Begley, who has been very sick is greatly improved.

Miss Roxie Cassell and Leon Graves were the pleasant guests of Mrs. Edna Harmon Saturday.

Messrs Parker Badgett and Sidney Smith, from Cross Roads, made a hustling rip up this week Sunday.

Miss Ethel and Verna Rogers were in Springfield Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Will Barker and children were the pleasant guests of Mr. and Mrs. Dolph Barriek Saturday and Sunday.

Miss Maggie Smith opened her school at this place Monday.

Mrs. Mollie Thompson, of Fredericksburg, spent a few days last week with her mother, Mrs. Diana Smith.

WHERE DIGNITY SITS ENTICED

by EDWARD B. CLARK

WHEN the Supreme court of the United States sits with full membership provided, no deaths occur during the vacation period and provided also that Associate Justice William H. Moody has so far recovered his health that he can join States enters upon its full term it will and esteem. Some one has said that Governor Hughes, while in the main a conservative, is a man who believes that the law should be interpreted in the spirit of 1910 rather than in the spirit of 1830. The criticism on the judgments rendered on occasion the Supreme court has been to the effect that seemingly some of the members live in the past, and that objection has been made to allowing new lights to strike the "laws of the ancients."

The Supreme court of the United States is said to be the most dignified body in the world. It looks it, but it must not be taken for granted that these judges, from the veteran Chief Justice down to the youngest man on the bench, have not their times of relaxation when they give full vent to their sense of humor. Justice John M. Harlan, who is seventy-nine years old, has a rare humor and he likes to give it play. Justice Edward D. White of Louisiana, who has been pronounced by many of the leading lawyers of the country to have a "judicial mind" not excelled in the United States, has hard work at times to keep from giving vent to his humorous conception of things as they appear in court. Such a proceeding would be dubbed undignified, and so Judge White manages to control his flow of wit when in court, but when the tribunal is not in session he gives his mood full play.

Judge Oliver Wendell Holmes, one of the most distinguished American scholars and one of its rarest humorists, has a great deal of the fun of his father in him, but self-consciously he tries to hold his expression in check on many occasions because it might be said that he was trying to make the law a little more like a joke. Second as Oliver Wendell Holmes the first, and this the present Justice modestly holds, to be impossible.

Not long ago a lawyer went to the residence of one of the associate justices of the Supreme court, a married man and one who the lawyer thought was the staidest of the staid. The visitor had gone to see the justice to get some advice on behalf of a person who he knew was a family friend of the one of whom he was seeking advice.

It seems that the man's wife had died, and while the husband was a kindly disposed and most excellent man generally, his father-in-law and mother-in-law insisted on treating the children who had been left motherless. The widower did not want to part with his children and neither did he want to make a fight which would bring the children into public notice and show that he had had a breach with his wife's father and mother.

The lawyer who was calling on the justice said, "What would you do if your father-in-law and mother-in-law on your wife's death tried to get your children away from you?" The answer came quick and sharp, "I'd tell them to go to the devil."

Now it happened that the justice's wife was sitting at his elbow and the lawyer at this strong expression from the justice's mind on the case of the court leader was like a pioneer and being followed by the chief justice and the associate justices in order of rank.

It is on the stroke of twelve, noon, that this procession takes up its way, and as it is known that noon is the hour for the court opening the corridor is always filled with people who want to see the judges file by. Just before they appear in the doorway of their robing room four attendants take up their places in the corridor and stretch across it two thick silken cords, thus making a passage through which the procession moves. It is the most dignified looking proceeding possible and the justices look neither to the right nor the left, but bow straight ahead in order that there may be no discrimination in courtesy between the members of the bar, newspaper men and those standing on the right and those standing on the left. It is a perfectly dignified bowing which it imparted it strikes some people also as being awfully funny.

Every Monday, as soon as court assemblies, it is the custom to read decisions on cases which have been considered and on which the court is to pass judgment. If the decision of a great case is expected the courtroom always is crowded and the members of the bar, newspaper men and others who have been present before on like occasions, look anxiously to see which judge is to read the important decision. If any one of the three or four justices is to read it there is a distinct sense of disappointment, because nobody except the reading judge is likely to hear the decision. In other words, some of the judges of the supreme court have such weak voices that not even the men closest to them can catch what they say and everybody must wait until the decision can be read before knowing what it means.

This inability or perhaps lack of desire on the part of some of the justices to read out loud, is a great trial to the newspaper correspondents who are anxious to telegraph the news of the decision at the earliest moment possible. There are other troubles which beset the correspondents as well as those which come from the poor enunciation and the weak voices of some of the justices. Legal language is the hardest kind of language for the layman to understand, and the result is that when the decision is read the first part of occasionally makes it seem certain that one side has won the case, while the tail end of the decision may reverse everything and give the case to the other side.

There was one striking instance of this in a great case which was decided three years ago. The city of Chicago was trying to effect changes in its streetcar system. The streetcar companies held that their franchise was good for 190 years and that the city could not oust them from any of their privileges under their franchise. The case went to the Supreme court and was of tremendous interest to all the cities in the United States. Moreover, the speculative interests of the country were keenly interested in the case, with the keenest anxiety and interest, for if it went one way it meant that certain stocks still would be of great value, and if it went the other way it meant that they would be worth little.

The decision was read in the Supreme court by a judge who had a good voice. Everybody had made up his mind that if the Supreme court decided that the railroad companies had a hundred years' franchise they had won the case and that the city had lost. This was regarded as the crucial feature of the whole controversy.

The newspaper correspondents from the great cities were in attendance at the court when the decision was read and they were ready to dispatch messengers instantly to the telegraph office with a brief dispatch saying either "The companies win" or "The city wins." This was all that was to be sent out at the first instance, for the situation was understood in every newspaper office in the country, and a single tip as to which side won would be sufficient to release long stories of the railroad controversy, and other stories already written of what the victory meant for the companies or for the city. In the very first part of the decision the statement was made that the Supreme court had decided that the companies had a franchise for 100 years. Instantly some of the correspondents sent dispatches, "The companies win." Two or three correspondents were held in their seats by a cautionary word from a veteran who had done long service in the Supreme court. He said, "Wait." In a few minutes, as the reading went on, it became apparent that the court had decided that while the companies had a franchise for 100 years they had practically no rights under it. On the strength of the mistake which was made in sending out some of the first dispatches on that day stocks went up and then when the truth came out they tumbled so fast that they hurt their heads.

When the justices led by the clerk and the chief justice to the Supreme courtroom, every body stands. When the judges have taken their seats the court cries, after the manner of court seers since the time of the patriarchs, declares that the high and honorable court is in session and that justice is to be dispensed. Just before taking their seats the justices bow to the assembled throng and the throng bows back. When the court cries, voice has died away everybody takes his seat and the proceedings begin.

The Supreme court sits in the old senate chamber of the capitol. It is the room where Webster, Hayne, Clay, Calhoun and others fought their battles. The gallery is a tiny affair capable of seating only about thirty people and the wonder is how when Webster delivered his great oration in reply to Hayne there could have been present the great crowd of which history tells us.

It was in the Supreme courtroom that the electoral college which decided the Hayes-Tilden contest held its sessions. The fifteen members of that commission occupied the seats of the justices and it is said that during the progress of the hearing the little room was crowded to capacity and that many people were overcome. It is an historic chamber and it is one of the places to which visitors to Washington bend their steps.

In the month of the Supreme court there are two veterans of the Union army and two veterans of the Confederate army. John Marshall Harlan, who is a Republican, raised the Tenth Kentucky Infantry and served Gen. George H. Thomas as division. He rose to the rank of colonel and his name was before the senate for confirmation as a brigadier general at a time late in the war when his father's death compelled him for family reasons to retire from the service.

Oliver Wendell Holmes of Boston graduated from Harvard college in 1861 and at once entered the Union army. At the battle of Ball's Bluff in October, 1861, Holmes was shot through the breast and for a long time it was believed he could not possibly recover. He did recover, however, and went back to the front, taking part in the battle of Antietam, where he was shot through the neck, and again his life was despaired of. Once more he recovered and went to the front, only to be wounded again at the battle of Fredericksburg.

Justice Edward Douglas White was born in Louisiana and he served through the Civil war in the Confederate service. Horace Harmon Lurton, who was appointed by President Taft to the vacancy caused by the death of Justice Peckham, entered the Confederate service when he was only seventeen years old and he served three years. He was with General Beauregard at Fort Donelson when the Confederate commander surrendered to General Grant. Lurton was a Confederate captive and it is not at all probable that the northern soldier had any conception that this youthful prisoner was one day to be appointed to the Supreme court of the United States by a Republican president.

The average city man thinks the farmer who buys a "gold brick" in need of a guardian. Yet thousands of these same city men have paid for "bricks" which any farmer would have known were the commonest kind of trash. There are all sorts of them nicely prepared for city men.

Now it is a scheme to buy fruit land on the Pacific coast. Our city friend is told he can make $1,000 an acre from the start. A few days ago I found a young man almost on his way to the bank to draw $800 for such a scheme, says a writer in the Metropolitan. He had a guaranty that in five years he would be drawing $3,000 an acre from his "farm." Next is some co-operative scheme for growing peaches in Texas or oranges in Florida. You do not work. You simply buy stock in the enterprise, pay for it, of course, and then sit in the shade and draw your dividends. You sit in the shade—no doubt of that—and the dividends draw like the memory of evil deeds.

RIVAL OF WESTON

Septuagenarian Walks 13 Miles Before Breakfast Daily.

Long "Hike" Every Morning—Has Many Friends Among the Indians.

New York.—The sight of a gaunt and bearded man in sombrero and cowboy duds who daily turns in his tracks at the New Jersey end of the Fort Lee ferry, has awakened the curiosity of dwellers in the vicinity.

The appearance of the man is decidedly "Wild West," and the youngsters near the ferry who are astir at about seven o'clock mornings have had visions of redskins and buffaloes lately when the stranger has rewarded their vigils by coming on the scene.

The western-looking one is Capt. Newton H. Chittenden, the first explorer of the Queen Charlotte islands, who although 70 years old, walks from Alpine, N. J., to the ferry, a distance of 13 miles, regularly before eight o'clock each morning as a "constitutional" to his exploit.

That Captain Chittenden deserves a nicely ornamented spot in the walkers' section of the Hall of Fame along with Colonel Weston and Mayor Gaynor is evident from his exploits.

In 1858 and 1859 he broke the record for long walks by making a continuous journey on foot diagonally across the continent from the Pacific to the Gulf of Mexico, a distance, in cluding several hundred miles of side expeditions, amounting to 3,350 miles. He was accompanied by a pack burro.

The trip was for archeological and ethnological research, and Captain Chittenden considers it one of the severest of his career. He estimates that he dragged his donkey more than five miles through the overworked bottoms of Louisiana.

Of the mountain 200,000 miles which Captain Chittenden has covered in his 40 years of traveling, 25,000 miles have been on foot. Testimony of his adventures are found in most of the famous museums in this country and in museums of Canada and England as well.

Among American pathfinders it is said that this explorer has devoted more severe labor to the accomplishment of his many expeditions than any other man of his country. His donations to museums have included many valuable relics and much data pertaining to the Indian tribes and prehistoric American life.

Captain Chittenden has visited practically every Indian tribe on the continent and has lived with some of the aboriginals for old times as long as six months, or a year. He has come quite recently become versed in several Indian languages. It is an interesting fact that during one or two excursions when protection from border ruffians demanded it, he never carried a weapon.

Chief Edmonson of the Queen Charlotte tribe was Captain Chittenden's great friend. Poundmaker, chief of the Saskatchewan Cree, whom he visited during the Sioux rebellion, was another intimate. Others were American Indians, a great war chief of the Sioux; Red Cloud, Sitting Bull, Two Sicks, and the noted Chief Joseph, who came to see him in camp on the Spokane river in the early days.

In the winter of 1908-9 upon visits the Chief Marston of the Caballita and Serano Indians of southern California he was invited to address the tribe at their fiesta, and he remained in camp with them for 40 days.

As evidence of his pedestrian habits, Captain Chittenden in 1882, when provided with free transportation to and from the gold fields of California, left the stage in the interior and proceeded 200 miles alone on foot among the various Indian tribes inhabiting that portion of British Columbia. Two years later, in the dead of winter, with the thermometer reaching 15 degrees below zero and the snow in places 15 feet deep, he walked alone over the mountains into the gold fields of Coeur d'Alene and then crossed the Bitter Root range into Montana, a distance altogether of more than 200 miles.

Country roads are child's play to Captain Chittenden, whose pedestrianism in the five years he would travel faster than that which his rivals have experienced. He attributes his unusual degree of endurance to inheritance and careful living. He has never smoked nor taken a drop of liquor, wine, or beer, and has not drunk a cup of tea or coffee in 40 years.

A Teacher in the Making. She was a popular young normal student, who had been to a party the night before, and as a consequence, was "not prepared" in the geography class.

The woman instructor, true to her method of drawing upon the general knowledge of a student rather than to permit a failure, after eliciting two or three inconsequential "stabs" from her fair but jaded disciple, asked for the products of China.

The victim brightened. "Tea," she asserted, preparing to sit down. "Yes, and what else?" encouraged the instructor.

The young woman smiled with sweet helplessness. "Now you can mention others, I am sure. Just think about what you learned."

"Tea," drawled the fute-like voice of the pretty girl, "and," puckering her forehead with an intellectual frown, "and laundry work."

Up to Date Milking Scene. "What's going on around here?" asked the surprised visitor. "Is this a hospital?"

"Oh, no," answered the tall man in the silk hat; "this is the stage setting for a New England farm drama. The next act is the milking scene, and the milkmaid is the cow's tooth brush."

"But I thought the young lady in the antiseptic apron was a trained nurse?"

"Oh, no," she is the milkmaid. The young man in the rubber gloves that you thought was a doctor is the farm boy. As soon as they bring in the sterilized milk and the pasteurized pails and find the cow's tooth brush the milking scene will begin."

For the Dog's Sake. "Where are you going for your summer vacation this year?" asked Mrs. Gotroff.

"O dear, I've not made up my mind yet," sighed Mrs. Rich wearily. "I want to go to the beach, but I don't know where my dear little Rich poodle can get plenty of fresh air."

Love, when true, faithful and well fed, is eminently the sanctifying element of human life; without it the mind cannot reach its fullest height. John Ruskin.

DEMOCRATIC TICKET.

FOR CONGRESS:
HON. BEN JOHNSON.

JOHNSON, THE MAN.

There are some indications that Hon. Ben Johnson will not have opposition for the race for Governor. This may seem strange, but it is not. Mayor Head, of Louisville, will cut but a small figure in the fight, as he has no following outside the limits of the city, and not a unanimous following there, though he is a good man and the people want him to remain mayor. Addams, the Cynthia candidate, is also a worthy gentleman, but he is only a local candidate, figuring in the returns from only the surrounding counties. Senator McCrory is an announced candidate, but it is not sure by any means that he will make a strong fight against Johnson, and that is the only kind of a fight that will answer the purpose.

Senator McCrory could not enter the fight. He has held offices all his life and he has never held one that was not creditably filled. He has been Governor and he made a good one. He was then promoted to the office of United States Senator. In other words he went up stairs from the Governor's office to that of Senator. He has received all the honors from that of magistrate through the line of Governor to Senator. Now to ask him to step down stairs to the office of Governor is a request that his friends should not demand of him, and which would be requiring him to accept an office in which he could not naturally take much pride. He has already enjoyed that honor, and although an able and conscientious man, he could not put the same vigor while acting as Governor into his work and determination as would one like Ben Johnson, who wants to be Governor in order that it can be said in history that he was once Governor and was as good a Governor as the State ever had. Governor McCrory has already made a record as Governor; he has no record to make, no place in history to secure for his name.

The two men are well known by the people. Neither has one word to say against the ability and honesty of the other. No one can tell. One has heaped up political honors until there are no honors in the gift of the people or Kentucky to bestow upon him. The other looks to the future, not to the past. Johnson is to live in the new Kentucky for many years yet. He is in the prime of his young manhood, as it were. He can, as Governor, create conditions that will be a benefit to the State and that will win for him a name that is the object of his ambition. Give him what he wants and he will give Kentucky what she needs.

We would not say that McCrory would be a fossil as Governor; far from it. But we do not believe he would put forth more than the passive energy that would be incumbent upon him by sense of duty. He would not be actuated by the same motives that would a younger man attempting to climb the political hills that Mr. McCrory has already ascended. Mr. Johnson has all the ability that any man in the State has; he has had experience; he has been judged, and he has the ambition which in the past has made him a determined, active officer in whatever capacity he has filled.

Another feature is that Senator McCrory enters the race, his friends say, by being implored to make the race, and if nominated he would expect the party to elect him. He would say, "I accepted the nomination at your request, and, if elected, I shall accept the office." The party would have to pull an indifferent candidate through. Johnson is fighting for the nomination and if he gets it he will pull the party through at the election.—Larus County Herald.

Saved at Death's Door.

The door of death seemed ready to open for Murray W. Ayres, of Transit Bridge, N. Y., when his life was wonderfully saved. "I was in a dreadful condition," he writes, "my skin was almost yellow; eyes sunken; tongue coated; emaciated from losing 40 pounds; growing weaker daily. Violent liver trouble pulled me down to death in spite of doctors. Then that matches medicine, Electric Bitters, cured me. I regained the 40 pounds lost and am now well and strong." For The Comfort Of The Horse

The above illustration shows how horses may have sound shoulders and necks even when doing the heaviest work.

No pressure on the upper and lower points of the bone, consequently no sore, swelling or collar sores. All the pressure is placed on the thick muscular portion of the shoulder where nature intended. Pressure applied at any other place is an injury to the horse. There you have the principle on which the collar is built. Pressure applied in the proper place and in the proper manner.

Call and let me show you and explain how and why it protects your horses.

SYNOPSIS.

Andy Meelen, aged and eccentric millionaire, is dying and orders his attorney to draw up a will leaving all his property to the son of a sister from whom he was separated years before and of the same name, but who he has learned is the attorney's daughter. He learned afterward that she and his daughter were dead.

"Well, that's only right. The money came out of old Nevada; let her have it back again. But mind you, Carboy, not till you've raked all creation with a fine-tooth comb to find Mattie's boy. Whom will you name as executor or trustee?"

"Must you have 'em?" Meelen answered anxiously, as though the functions referred to were of a species noxious and undesirable.

"Undoubtedly; they are necessary evils."

Meelen frowned in perplexity. It seemed as though it were costing him far more trouble to leave his money behind him than it had been to amass it and guard it during his eventful life. "Can't you tellers act?" he inquired dubiously at length. "You fellows with a fine-tooth comb and his partners."

"Certainly, if you wish it. Two will be sufficient. Suppose we say Mr. Passavant and myself?"

With a gesture as of one wearied with the whole subject Meelen signified assent. Then, as the lawyer rose to go indoors, he said:

"Fix it up quick, Carboy. I'm mortal tired!"

By this time the sun had set behind the western wall, and the moon and Evan appeared to wheel his master within. But the tough old fellow demurred. Half his nights had been spent in the open air, with the usual stary canopy for a tent. Now that the end was near, he dreaded the cribbed and cabined confinement of four walls. So a lantern was brought, hung to the rafters of the porch, where its dim radiance could not interfere with that piercing gaze which to the last remained lovingly over the mountain prospect.

One, two hours passed, and save for the steady, harshly rhythmic "crunch-crunch" of the wheels, the town below was strangely quiet. Every soul therein knew that the mastermind in the hillside crypt was passing away; hushed were the usual sounds of rude revelry and "wide-open" license. It was felt to be a fatal night for the town of Meelen.

At length Mr. Carboy's task was done. A table was carried on to the porch; by lantern-light the will was read to the testator, who turned his eyes to meet those of the attorney in mute approval when the reading was ended. Then, lifted and supported by old Evan, he deeded his uncouth and sprawling signature, the witness followed, and the deed was done which bequeathed a princely fortune and a royal revenue to—whom?

Next morning, however, Meelen was found lifeless in bed, his gnarled and knotted features composed in a peaceful, almost ecstatic smile.

"Perhaps he has found Minnie!" mused the lawyer, with humid eyes, as he stood by the side of his strange client.

CHAPTER II.

In an old-fashioned sitting room in an antiquated brick house on a fashionable quarter of downtown New York formerly known as Greenwich village there sat, one autumn evening, a young couple, both of whom were exceedingly good to look upon.

To the judicious observer it would have been apparent from their attitude and bearing, each towards the other that they were something more than mere friends, yet less than man and wife. In fact, they were contented and happy dwellers in that delectable border-land known as Being Engaged.

The girl was fairly tall of stature, brunette as to complexion, with wealth of fine and glossy dark hair which rippled and waved around a small but shapely head and above a witchingly feminine forehead, white and broad and low. Her eyes were of a very steadfast gray gaze, set widely apart, giving one the impression of quiet repose and cool judgment.

Above a strong and supple throat hung her lock older and more womanly than her years, and she was smiling. She was busied with one of those trifles of needlework which keep the fingers busy without curbing one's tongue, and at the same time seemed to display to admiring and even coquettish advantage a very shapely artist and hand. Yet even the dearest of her feminine friends would never have insinuated that Eunice Treveca was the least bit of a coquette. Indeed, it needed but a glance into the depths of those quiet gray eyes to convince you that that there was a nature tender and true as that of the Douglas himself.

So at least thought young Wilfrid Stennis, who sat opposite to her, and who certainly enjoyed the best opportunities in the world to know her. He was a pleasant, wholesome lad, fair and droll, with light golden-brown hair and mustache, slim and with slightly stooped shoulders. A rather weak face on the whole, one might say, though perhaps this was partly owing to a rather querulous droop of the mouth, which barely veiled the sensitive mouth; a beard would better have hidden a chin which was far too pretty for any mere man.

Had you guessed him to be a clerk or a bookkeeper you would not have been far astray—none of those men who make exceedingly valuable and faithful servants to the poor masters. As to character, he was neither better nor worse than thousands of other youngsters who start out in life as downtown office boys at $3 a week, the goal of whose ambition is to earn fifteen hundred or two thousand dollars a year, to marry some pleasant girl, settle in a suburban flat or a little one-of-a-row house over in Brooklyn, raise a small family get along on a couple of new suits of clothes each year, and have an occasional visit to the theater in winter and an outing on Saturday afternoons at Coney Island or Rockaway.

Not a wildly ambitious or thrilling existence, it may be granted, yet there are hundreds and thousands of such men—gentlemanly and refined, neither very strong nor very weak, but vicious nor conspicuously virtuous, but who, in a paraphrase of the old Shorter Catechism, are plausibly or mechanically "doing their duty" in that state of life to which it has pleased the Almighty to call them. It is of kindred stuff that the "average citizen" is made.

Even to such men strange dreams may come—fond and foolish visions of wealth and power, hopeless of realization, perhaps yet nevertheless frequently prompted by certain innate or inherited cravings for the good things of this life which only money can procure, and for the enjoyment of which they feel a yearning and an infinite capacity if only they had the chance.

Wilfrid, a splendid thing to be sure, was no exception in this respect. "Just think of what a man could do if he were really in possession of money!"

son do not get half as much out of life as they might."

"Of course they don't!" assented Wilfrid dogmatically. "Why, look at him!" he rambled on. "That only half-baked fellow who never had any education to speak of; had to keep my nose to the grindstone all my life; as you know, there were always two ways for every dollar to go as long as mother was alive, on account of her many years of hopeless illness; but, in spite of my few opportunities, I'll bet I could show some of those fellows how to enjoy their wealth!"

"Of course you could," Eunice agreed, with a loving woman's open fondness and indulgence for the man she has promised to marry. "But we'll be just as happy without the money, won't we, Wilfrid?"

"Not a doubt of it!" he exclaimed, starting to her side, bending over her and pressing his lips to her shining coils of hair. "Why, possessing you and your love, dear, I'm the richest fellow in New York today."

She tilted back her head to look into his eyes as he gazed fondly down into hers.

"That's the way I love to hear you speak," she murmured. "Money can't buy some things in life, but it can buy a truisim which was sealed in a very expressive and satisfactory manner by the naturally ardent Wilfrid."

Eunice, though very well educated and refined—indeed she would have been described as "quite above her station, my dear"—was only an occasional visitor to the theater in winter and an outing on Saturday afternoons at Coney Island or Rockaway.

ROUND ABOUT — THE STATE —

MOST IMPORTANT NEWS GATHERED FROM ALL PARTS OF KENTUCKY

GOES VIOLENTLY INSANE.

Col. Watterson's Son Believed to Be Suffering from Religious Melancholia.

Saugerties, N. Y.—Ewing Watterson, eldest son of Henry Watterson, editor of the Louisville Courier-Journal, who has been suffering from an affection of the mind for several years, became violently insane and shot and mortally wounded Michael J. Martin, proprietor of the Market Street hotel. Watterson ran up the street, waving his pistol wildly and firing at every one who crossed his path.

He was pursued by friends of Martin, several of whom had guns, which they fired at Watterson, none of the shots taking effect. Watterson was finally captured and captured by a policeman.

Young Watterson owns a farm about five miles from Saugerties, where he lives with his wife and three children. Martin was surprised when Watterson walked into the corridor of the hotel.

New York.—Henry Watterson received the first news of his son's trouble at the Manhattan club, where he makes his home when in New York. He said that he and Mrs. Watterson had been expecting trouble from Ewing for years.

"That was our only fear," said Col. Watterson. "He was thought to have been suffering from a long time. His mother and I have for a long time believed him to be insane, but we have thought he was harmless so. It has been one of those sad cases of religious melancholia, and his symptoms were extreme sensitiveness and a disposition to imagine himself offended and insulted for little or no cause. He has suffered from this religious mania for three or four years."

This is the second misfortune that Col. Watterson, the veteran Kentucky editor, has suffered. His eldest son, within two years. Harvey W. Watterson, a younger son, was killed in November in 1908 through a strange accident. He fell from the nineteenth floor of the Trust Co. of North America building at No. 37 Wall street in a manner that was never explained.

NARROW ESCAPE.

Women Entering Cellar With Light Caused Explosion.

Lexington, Ky.—Mrs. Bettie Lankart and daughter, Susie, had a narrow escape from death in a peculiar manner.

During the heavy rain Mrs. Lankart heard water rushing into the cellar under her residence and with her daughter went with a lighted lamp to reconnoiter.

There was some carbon in the cellar which had been submerged by the water. This formed a gas, somewhat like mine gas, and when the women entered with the lamp there was an explosion.

Both women were stunned and badly injured. Peter King, to whom the women were going, was also injured. The noise of the explosion, however, attracted Mr. Lankart and others and the women were rescued.

PROMINENT BONIFACE DEAD.

Frankfort, Ky.—Patrick O'Brien, the proprietor of the Frankfort hotel, died at his room in the hotel after an illness that lasted for many months.

His first serious illness was early last fall.

He had some serious kidney trouble that could not be cured, and after suffering for some time with his condition became so serious that physicians gave up all hope.

He had been a resident of Woodford county for several years before he moved to Frankfort and took charge of the Frankfort hotel and made for himself an enviable reputation.

He is survived by his wife and two children. Peter King, to whom the women were going, was also injured. The noise of the explosion, however, attracted Mr. Lankart and others and the women were rescued.

He was very devoted. Died a few days ago in New York. The funeral was in Louisville.

Middleboro.—Cand Cornett, son of Judge A. B. Cornett, of Harlan county, and a brother of the Hon. D. B. Cornett, secretary of the railroad commission, died from the effects of an operation for appendicitis. Mr. Cornett was a young man, 18 years old.

CROPS SHOW UP WELL.

Hopkinsville, Ky.—Rainy weather prevented wheat thrashing, except in a few favored localities. Had it not been for the rains the harvest of the crop in this county would have been thrashed by now. Reports indicate that the quality of the grain will be excellent. The weather is so favorable that the yield will be comparatively light.

Corn, hay, oats and other growing crops show up well and will develop under the favorable conditions. Oats are especially luxuriant.

TUMOR OF THE PEARS GROWTH

Removed by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Holly Springs, Miss.—"Words are inadequate for me to express what your wonderful medicines have done for me. The doctors said I had a tumor, and I had an operation, but was soon as bad as before. I would not have believed it, but I do. I am glad to say that now I look and feel so well that my friends keep asking me what has helped me so much, and I gladly recommend your 'Vegetable Compound.'—Mrs. WILLIAM EDWARDS, Holly Springs, Miss.

One of the greatest triumphs of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the conquering of woman's dread enemy—tumor. If you have mysterious pains, inflammation, ulceration or displacement, don't wait for time to confirm your fears and go through the horrors of a hospital operation, but try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at once.

For thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female troubles, and such unquestionable testimony as the above proves the value of this family remedy, and should give everyone confidence.

If you would like special advice about your case, write a plain letter to Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. Her advice is free, and always helpful.

Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Moran and E. D. Kelly and wife were guests of Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Gostley Sunday.

J. E. Gostley and wife took dinner with Mr. and Mrs. T. Reed at Bookers Sunday.

Mrs. Elizabeth Humphrey and charming daughter, Miss Katherine, of Nelson county, were recent callers in this section.

Jas. Moran, Sr., recently purchased a driving horse from Pete Shehan for $185.

Jeff Gostley bought a driving mare from Benedict Clements last week for $125.

Tatum & Brown recently purchased a bunch of nice hogs from Hunter Gostley.

Miss Virginia Foster, of Louisville, entertained a number of her friends at a bounteous supper last Tuesday evening.

Several from this place have been attending the Chautauqua at Lebanon during the past week.

J. C. Hughes and aunt, Mrs. Williams, of Bloomfield, were in Louisville Wednesday on business.

Misses Pearl and Imogene Gostley were guests of Miss Mattie Tucker, of near Fredericktown, last week.

Edward Gostley and family were guests of relatives near Bookers Sunday.

Miss Pearl Gostley, accompanied by John Tucker, attended the Chautauqua at Lebanon, Thursday.

T. C. Tatum was in Louisville last week replenishing his stock of goods.

W. N. Foster, of 808 E. Market St., Louisville, is expected in a few days to spend a month with relatives here.

Jas. Moran, Sr., had a valuable mare badly cut in some mysterious manner Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Baker and Susie Edgerton and brother, of Pleasant Grove, were entertained by Mrs. S. E. Piles on the 4th inst.

Your correspondent had a valuable driving mare entangled in a wire fence last week and as a result she is in a bad condition, but will recover.

Jas. Moran, Jr., Benedict Clements, Jeff Gostley and Pete Shehan were among those who attended the Chautauqua on the 4th inst., from this place.

Edgar Linton and sister, of Seneca Hall, were recent guests of Mrs. Hugh Gostley, of this place.

H. H. Tatum recently purchased three steers from J. L. Moran at $30 per head.

Much damage has been done to the wheat and rye that had been cut, by the continued rains.

G. C. Donahoe will start his threshing machine this week. Gilbert is an expert threshman, and all will do well who get him to do their threshing this season.

Misses Louise and Thelma Tatum entertained a number of their friends at a delightful 6 o'clock dinner on Wednesday evening, in honor of their guest, Miss Virginia Beatrice Foster, of Louisville. All of those who were in attendance enjoyed the delicious delicacies to the utmost, after which games of every conceivable nature, were indulged in with much gusto.

Foster rendered a piano duet, which was well received, as were a number of songs by Tatum Bros. Several numbers were rendered in chorus which met with high applause. Considering that all of the present, including your correspondent, as an honorary guest, were of the junior society circle, they put to the blush many of the seniors when it comes to real fun and pleasure unadorned. And let me say, by way of parenthesis, that the writer ate so much and enjoyed it so well that it took three days to recover from the effects. We must acknowledge the Misses Tatum as charming hostesses and pleasant entertainers and to them we extend hearty thanks for their kind invitation and wish for them the speedy return of many more 6 o'clock dinners.

DAD'S TYRANNY.

Result of the Test That Was Imposed Upon the Lovers.

By FRANK H. SWEET.
(Copyright, 1900, by Associated Literary

Mrs. Marsden was away, the cook gone without notice, and Helen for the first time in her pampered life was obliged to get supper. And Ned was coming that very evening to have a talk with her father about something.

In due time the meal was ready, all but the tea. She packed the filled platter and dishes away into the warming oven, put about a couple of tea into the teapot—father liked strong tea—and though the water hadn't reached the boiling point yet, she really couldn't afford to wait, so she poured it out, turned the gas stove low and hurried up to her room to arrange her toilet suitably for Ned's reception.

It was a flushed and perturbed Helen who faced father, Ned and the boys at the supper table. Father didn't say a word and didn't seem to have any appetite. Neither did the boys. Ned just looked at her and—well, people in love are not expected to care much about what they eat.

And that was the solemn moment when father called her into the library, where he and Ned had been closeted for the last half hour.

Father drew her into his arms, looked tenderly at her and planted a prickly kiss on her mouth. "The symptoms were all favorable, and in great relief Helen threw her arms around her father's neck, but then they stood for a minute or two in silent, loving embrace. It was a trying moment for Ned, looking on with hungry eyes.

Finally father spoke. "Now, little girl, he said, "you young people seem to have arranged things to your entire satisfaction, and I think it's about time for me to put in a word or two, in fact—to state for your mother's absence. How do you propose to live?"

Helen's eyes flew over to Ned, who reddened as he said, "I have already explained to you."

"Yes," interrupted the practical father. "You have explained to me what

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dread disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages. That disease is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

ASSIGNEE'S SALE OF TATHAM SPRINGS

As Assignee of The Tatham Springs Company I will on THURSDAY, AUG. 18, 1910 ABOUT THE HOUR OF 1:00 O'CLOCK, P. M.,

At the front door of the Tatham Springs, Washington County, Ky., sell at public auction all the property owned by said company, consisting of about seven acres of land on which is situated the celebrated Tatham Springs, a two-story Hotel building, Stables, Power House, Ice House, Bowling Alley, Servants' Houses and other necessary outbuildings.

The Hotel contains about thirty beds rooms all fronting on broad verandas, and are all furnished with hardwood furniture and bedding of all kinds. The parlors, office, dining room and kitchen are all fully equipped with all necessary furniture, suitable for the continuation of the business as a health and pleasure resort.

The hotel is situated on a Beautifully Shaded Island above high water overlooking Chaplin River, which affords excellent fishing, boating and bathing. The hotel is supplied with water from the spring by a first-class water system.

This property will be sold as a whole, and for the reason that the owners cannot give the business the attention it demands to maintain it as an attractive, first-class health and pleasure resort as it should and can be under proper and attentive management.

The property is situated on the Automobile line as established by the Automobile Clubs of Kentucky, and on the projected trolley line from Louisville to connect with the trolley system now maintained in Central Kentucky, and is accessible by other conveyances from all points in the State.

The merits of the Celebrated Tatham Water is known throughout Kentucky and in other States. The natural advantages of this place in not surpassed by any similar resort in Kentucky.

Mrs. S. E. Wornall is now in charge of the hotel and will take pleasure in showing the property to any persons who may be interested in the sale.

The property will be sold for one-fourth cash, the remainder payable in one, two and three years. day of sale at the rate of six per centum per annum and payable annually with good security and containing a lien on the property, and a clause that in default of the payment of any note or installment of interest at maturity, then all of the notes to become due. If any purchaser desires further time for payment than as above indicated the extension can be arranged on satisfactory terms to be agreed on.

W. E. SELECMAN, Assignee of Tatham Springs Co.
This sale does not interfere with the management of the Hotel by Mrs. Wornall this year.

Free Liver Remedy
It is well to stop a physical ailment at the first signs of its approach, and that is especially true of liver trouble, which can eventually give rise to so many serious complications. Many have liver trouble and imagine it is indigestion, and hence take the wrong remedy.

When the liver does not store up sufficient nutrient blood it becomes sluggish, and in this way disturbs the stomach and bowels, with which it is supposed to work in harmony. Then comes the sallow complexion, the yellow tinge to the skin, the itching of the forehead, the thinning of the hair, the loss of appetite, the nervousness, the headache, the dizziness, the general feeling of uneasiness, the constipation
